Paderewski Plays Beethoven With His Glorious Tone

Performance Like That When He Took Town by Storm Thirty Years Ago.

By W. J. HENDERSON.

The fourth Thursday matinee of the Symphony Society at Carnegie Hall yesterday acquired special importance rewski as the solo player. Those music lovers who take themselves and planist play one of the master con certos as they get from listening to a recital. It is conceded that the recital is a more popular medium for the display of a musician's art.

Mr. Paderewski, making his first appearance as a soloist with orchestra since his return to the local platform, might easily have chosen one of the more superficial and brilliant con certos, but there are two reasons why Mr. and Mrs. John S. Phipps of Westbury House, Westbury, L. I., are at the St. Regis, where also are Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Bradley of Convent, N. J. planist respects his art and wishes planist respects his art and wishe always to be regarded as one of it

But it is certain that the pianist's tone yesterday after-noon was that of the great lyric performer who took this town by storn thirty years ago.

Given Paderewski with his most beautiful tone at his command, some-thing glorious in the way of piano playing is to be expected. But this is only the beginning of things. The end of the achievement was the eloquence of the proclamation of Beethoven's thought. A more dignified and yet boetic reading of the concerto would be difficult to conceive. It was all song, but the song of a musical prophet, the song of the supreme master who spoke a celestial musical lanto greet the artist when he appeared

The American Art Association, 30 East 57th St., New York City.

Gentlemen—Confirming our conversation regarding a sale of our collection of real laces and linens, also Burano laces from the School of H. M. Queen Margherita of Italy, we wish to say that owing to the new customs duty which has been placed upon the importation of laces, amounting to over 90% when finally landed in New York, we find it necessary to sublet our store at 719 5th av. and reduce our extensive collection through a public sale.

It is our belief that with the added duty imposed upon laces, it will, in the future, be almost prohibitive to import any of the real laces from Europe, and we feel positive that it will be a great advantage to the American public to make purchases of our laces and linens at our forthcoming unrestricted public sale.

Thanking you, we are, yours very truly,

Norman Spang, formerly of Pitts burgh and New York, died in Paris on burgh and New York, died in Paris on Saturday. Mr. Spang had made his home in France for the last twenty years. He was a son of Charles F. Spang, one of the original steel manufacturers of America, who founded the firm of Spang. Chalfant & Co., which company has had mills at Etna, near Pittsburgh, for more than seventy-five years. Mr. Spang was an engineer and his famous collection of minerals was Interesting Facts From That society in the leading cities of the country was not in as marriageable a mood as usuar during the current year, according to statistics deduced from a national fashionable survey that prefaced the publication of the 1923 Social Register, which has just come from the press. The date of publication is considerably in advance of that of past years.

Up to the opening of the fiscal year of the Register, which is the opening of the winter season in society, there had been 798 weddings in the chief social centers, against $71 in the precedial centers $71 in Publication's National Fashthe fashionable death rate in 1922 over 1921, the figures in this column being 539 deaths this year and 498 last.

The Social Register records the names and addresses of members of prominent families grouped together with the clubs and societies to which they belong, and indicates the names of the children in the order of their ages, qualifying the misses from 14 to 17 and messrs, from 17 to 29 as juniors.

Where it is desired to find the hame of a married woman who may be remembered only by her malden name the column of "Married Maidens" in the back of the volume reveals the present married name. Where brides have married residents of other cities the city of their present residence is indicated and their names may be traced through the Locater, which gives in alphabetical order the names in all the Social Registers issued by the association.

The custom of affixing stars opposite the names of veterans of the world war still its in force. Hugh De Haven of 59 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, president of the De Haven Manufacturing Company, iron and steel, died Wednesday evening at the Hotel Netherland, where he had lived for five years. He was born in Philadelphia in 1862. He spent his early years in the West and went to Brooklyn in 1891 and founded the iron and steel company. He was a member of the National Arts Club.
